PASSING OF THE PIONEERS.

The oldest house in the state of Nevada was destroyed by fire that swept half the town of Genoa out of existence Tuesday afternoon, and now all that remains of this priceless landmark is a pile of burnt ruins. The matter of purchasing the building and removing it to the capitol grounds at Carson, has come up before the state legislature several times, but no definite action was ever taken, the law makers holding to the opinion that it was better to spend the money for divers other purposes. In this way they were wrong, for there was a chance to pay an everlasting tribute to the pioneers who suffered many privations that they might blaze the way for others to emigrate to Nevada.

Could the walls of the destroyed house talk, before the conflagration, many tales of the hardships endured by the brave bunch of pioneers would have been related and each and every member of the legislature should be ashamed that they had opposed making the old log cabin the property of the state. All that exists in Nevada today is practically due to the efforts of the pioneers and now there is no landmark or remembrance to bring to mind the happenings of long ago. Posterity will have to be content with gazing at a few faded photographs or perhaps a small relic, while the most priceless article of all will be but a faint memory, a recollection of the dim past, fast receding with each passing day.

In other states the old forts have passed into the possession of societies or even the state, and sums are set aside to repair the relics and keep them in a fair state of preservation. But in Nevada it is different and within a few years, the last of the living remembrances will have passed to their grave.

Can it be possible that Nevada is ungrateful?

INSTRUCTIONS ON THE PRIMARIES.

An aspirant for office, seeking the nomination at the primaries, must bear in mind the following facts:

He must seek the nomination of the party with which he affiliated at the last general election, or must have voted for a majority of the candidates of that party at the said election. In filing his nomination papers, he must take oath to one of two conditions. If he cannot take such oath he cannot go on the ticket.

But the primary law cannot and does not prevent any individual otherwise legally qualified, from seeking election to office, and a provision is made whereby he may run independent. The provision of the old Australian ballot law, applies in this case. The aspirant may have his name placed upon the official ballot at the November election, by filing a petition containing the names of 10 per cent of the entire vote of the precinct, county or state, as the case may be, cast at the last preceding election. It must be 10 per cent of the entire vote, not 10 per cent of any one party. It should also be understood that any candidate whose name appears on the ticket at the primary election and who is defeated, cannot then file a petition as an independent candidate.

Voters should in turn keep in mind, in signing petitions being circulated for primary nominations, that they should sign the petition of either democratic or republican candidates or none at all. The nomination blank which they sign declares: "I intend to support for such nomination the candidate named herein." But one cannot vote for a republican for one office and a democrat for another at the primary. One set of judges acts for the primaries of both parties. There will be two tickets of different colors; one the democratic and the other the republican. When the voter approaches to vote he must declare which party he belongs to and he will be handed the ticket containing all the names of the candidates for the nomination of that party. For instance, if he states he is a democrat, he will be handed a democratic ticket with all the candidates of that party for the various offices. No other names will appear. No republican candidates will be on that ticket. Therefore he has not the option of voting for a republican for any particular position, while voting for democrats for all the other places. These are distinctly "party" primaries. Therefore, when a voter signs the nomination blank of a democrat for one office and a republican for another, it will be impossible for him to carry out the pledge or oath he subscribes to in both cases, which oath says: "And further I declare that I intend to support for such nomination the candidate named herein," whose nomination papers he has signed. Of course, this means at the primary election alone. When it comes to the regular November election, there will be only the one ballot with the names of the successful candidates upon it, and the voter then can vote for anyone of either party he chooses, as in elections heretofore.

AVIATION EXHIBITION AT CARSON CITY

Quite a few of the Tonopah people have expressed a desire to attend the aviation exhibition at Carson City on July 5, and it is probable that Tonopah will be represented there, for those who journey to see the fight on the Fourth can take in the exhibition on the following day. This will be the first meeting of the bird men in Nevada and should prove an excellent drawing card for the carnival in the capitol city.

AUTO PARTY LEAVES TODAY FOR RENO

Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Brady, Key Pittman, Dr. R. J. Mapes, J. C. Schwinn, auditor of the Tonopah Mining company, and J. C. Millbrae of Goldfield, leave this morning for Reno. TONOPAH CLUB SECURES LATEST EDITION OF THE NATIONAL EMBLEM.

When the glorious Fourth arrives in Tonopah, the first flag to contain forty-eight stars, to be unfurled in this city, will be flown from the pole that graces the Tonopah Club building. It has only been a few days that this union has been composed of forty-eight states, but the flag manufacturing firms seem to have lost no time in adding the two stars to "Old Glory." The latest stars represent Arizona and New Mexico. However, it will not be long before three new stars, for Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico will be likely candidates for statehood honors.
